PREFACE

We have, with deep regret, to record the resignation of Miss Paues from the editorship of the Bibliography. It is impossible to estimate the loss that it has suffered by her withdrawal, or the debt that the Association owes to her for her untiring and valuable work. Only those who were privileged to help in the first two or three years in which the Bibliography appeared can guess at the difficulties which attend the beginning of such an enterprise. The classification as it now exists had not then been tested or even fully planned, and the contributors only gradually came to understand what was required of them. Miss Paues successfully guided the Bibliography through these difficult years of its infancy, and the steadily increasing public and the appreciative press notices which have marked its later appearances are welcome signs that her work has received the attention that it deserves. The present editor owes a further debt to Miss Paues for her generous help during the preparation of this issue and for most unselfishly joining the ranks of the contributors to it.

In this issue the classification is essentially the same as that used by Miss Paues, but a number of articles on idioms seemed to demand the creation of a new sub-section under English Language (see VI (e)). Owing to a misconception, numbers have been allotted to cross-references and this makes it appear that the total number of entries is far larger this year than last; actually this is not so, and efforts have been made to diminish rather than to increase the total.

The thanks of the Association are due to the following contributors for the time and thought they have so willingly spared: Prof. C. S. Northup of Cornell, assisted by Prof. L. N. Broughton of Cornell, Prof. Ross Steeves of Columbia, and Prof. T. H. Mabbott of Northwestern University (America); Miss Buckhurst, M.A., Miss Horner, Miss Killby, Miss E. Seaton, M.A., Miss Sergeantson, D.Phil., and Miss Whitelock (Britain and Ireland); Dr L. Grootaers, Leuven (Belgium); Prof. Otto Funke and Prof. V. Mathesius, Prague (Czecho-Slovakia); Prof. A. Koszul, Strasbourg (France); Mr R. W. Zandvoort, Nijmegen (Holland); Prof. P. Rebora, Manchester, and Prof. A. Benedetti, Palermo (Italy); Dr I. Massey, London, Mrs R. Somerset, Oxford, and Dr Egon Mühlbach, Leipzig (Germany); Prof. Eilert Ekwall, Lund (Sweden); Dr G. Hjört and Candmag. Torsten Dahl, Copenhagen (Denmark); Prof. U. Lindelöf, Helsingfors (Finland); Prof. A. Trampe Bødtker, Oslo (Norway). To two of the contributors the Association records special thanks—to Prof. Northup for coming to the rescue of the American contribution at a critical moment and to Miss Seaton for casting a lynx-eye over the proofs. The editor wishes also to thank Prof. Carleton Brown for kindly sending a proof of the P.M.L.A. Bibliography of English Language and Literature, Miss R. Wadham for help with the index, and the staff of the University Press for the care and accuracy with which the printing has been done.

In conclusion an apology must be made to the Association and the contributors for the late appearance of this issue. The blame is to be laid partly at the door of the French postal system; a packet of proofs, sent, with the "copy," to France, failed to appear and publication was delayed while attempts were being made to recover it. The attempts were vain and it is feared that the issue may show some errors difficult to detect without the "copy."

D. EVERETT.

PREFACE

It is the first duty of the Editors to draw attention to the slight alterations that have been made in classification. The former Section VIII (Metre and Style) has disappeared, items concerned with style being disposed of under Literary Criticism, and items concerned with metre forming a new sub-section of Literature General, entitled Study of Metre. Two large sub-sections (Dialect and Vulgar English) have been classed together as Subsidiary Forms of English and take the place of the old Section VIII. In Section VII the first sub-section has been re-christened Grammars, with two sub-divisions, Historical Grammars and Grammars of Present Day English. It is hoped that these alterations will meet some of the criticisms of the classification.

For the first time a list of Corrigenda appears. For many of the items in it, as well as for helpful criticism, the Editors have to thank Mr R. W. Zandvoort.

In spite of determined efforts to eliminate unimportant items, the Bibliography is somewhat larger this year than last. To increase its size is certainly not one of the aims of the Editors; but they would remind both users and contributors that it is impossible to gauge the importance of a doubtful book or article without reference to it; and that such reference is often out of their power. The Editors are therefore greatly at the mercy of contributors in the matter of both quality and bulk.

The following contributors have most generously given their help: Professor L. N. Broughton, Cornell University (America); Miss Buckhurst, M.A., Miss Robertson, M.A., Miss Sergeantson, D.Phil., Miss Walker, Ph.D., and Miss Whitelock (Britain and Ireland); Dr L. Grootaers, Leuven (Belgium); Professor V. Mathesius, Prague (Czecho-Slovakia); Professor A. Koszul, Strasbourg (France); Mr R. W. Zandvoort, Nijmegen (Holland); Professor P. Rébora, Manchester (Italy); Dr I. Massey, London, Mrs R. Somerset, Oxford, and Dr Egon Mühlbach, Leipzig (Germany); Professor Eilert Ekwall, Lund (Sweden); Dr G. Hjört and Candmag. Torsten Dahl, Copenhagen (Denmark); Professor U. Lindelöf, Helsingfors (Finland); Mr Gernian Arteta, Madrid (Spain). To all these the Association owes most grateful thanks, but a special expression of gratitude is due to Professor Broughton who alone was responsible for the whole American contribution, almost a third of the entire Bibliography.

The Editors also wish to thank Professor A. C. Baugh for kindly sending a copy of the P.M.L.A. Bibliography of English Language and Literature and the staff of the University Press for the care and skill shown in the printing.

PREFACE

THE Editors have again made certain alterations in classification in the hope that these will facilitate reference to the Bibliography. In view of the amount of work being done on American English at the present time, the items in Section VIII (Subsidiary Forms of English) have been reclassified into (a) English Dialects, (b) Vulgar English, Slang, Cant, (c) American English (including Slang). A third sub-section, Philosophy and Science, has been added in the section entitled Old and Middle English: Subsidiary. Fifteenth Century Literature, hitherto classed indiscriminately with Middle English, has now been given a separate section under Modern English. This has necessitated the re-numbering of the sections containing the later centuries. The bewilderingly long list of Shakespeare items has been subdivided into Editions, General Criticism and Criticism of individual works.

The Editors have to thank Professor L. N. Broughton and Dr R. W. Zandvoort for many of the items in the regrettably long list of Corrigenda.

Several of the regular contributors responsible for the British material have been unable to help this year owing to pressure of work or ill-health, but new helpers have willingly come forward and given valuable assistance. The complete list of contributors to whom the Editors are indebted for material is as follows: Professor L. N. Broughton (America); Miss Serjeantson, D.Phil., Miss Walker, Ph.D., Miss Savage, M.A., Miss Senior, M.A., Miss Lea, M.A., Miss Giffin, A.M., Miss I. Evans, B.A., Miss Constable, B.A. (Britain and Ireland); Dr L. Grootaers, Leuven (Belgium); Professor V. Mathesius, Prague (Czecho-Slovakia); Professor E. Pons, Strasbourg (France); Dr R. W. Zandvoort, Nijmegen (Holland); Professor P. Rébora, Manchester (Italy); Dr Egon Mühlbach, Leipzig (Germany); Professor Eilert Ekwall, Lund (Sweden); Dr G. Hjört and Candmag. Torsten Dahl, Copenhagen (Denmark);

Professor U. Lindelöf, Helsingfors (Finland); Professor Trampe Bødtker, Oslo (Norway). The Association owes most grateful thanks to all these for the time and thought they have so generously given, and again special thanks are due to Professor Broughton who is as unsparing of interest and encouragement as he is of time.

The staff of the Cambridge University Press have shown the care and skill on which the Editors have come to rely and for which they gladly record their thanks.

"The rules of English verse have in different ages been the subject of lively discussion among scholars....Addiction to the art of verse translation and official concern in the curriculum of secondary schools brought me to think there was something yet to be said, in the shape of a systematic Prosody on inductive lines; one that should investigate the practice of the most excellent of our metrists, and lay down the rules of verse as found to have been observed by them."—From the Preface.

THE LAWS OF VERSE. By J. C. ANDERSEN, F.N.Z.Inst. Crown 8vo. 7s 6d net.
